WHITTAKER'S WHACK

STILL A PUZZLE AT WEST POINT.

Growing Belief that the Colored Cadet Inflicted the Wounds Upon Himself—Dr. Alexander's Diagnosis—The Case Before the Court of Investigation.

NEW YORK, April 10.—Dr. Alexander, the surgeon of the West Point academy, who was called to see Whittaker immediately following his discovery in a seemingly unconscious condition in his room, makes a very clear statement, but wholly professional in its character—that is to say, without passing any opinion upon the correctness or otherwise of Whittaker's story.

"What did you think of Whittaker's condition when you first saw him?" was among the first questions asked.

"He looked at first glance as though he might be dead or dying," answered the doctor. "I quickly satisfied myself that he was still in the land of the living. As he made no response to my shaking him, and seemed to be in an unconscious condition, I attempted to raise one of his eyelids. He held it tightly closed."

"What did you infer from that?"

"I don't feel at liberty to give you my inferences; I will simply state the facts as they were and then you can draw your own inferences. I saw he had control of the muscles of his eyelids. No one in an unconscious condition can possibly have this control."

"What was another fact that came under your observation?"

"He was in no such condition as a man would be who had been subjected to the brutal physical treatment he claimed to have received. He was not tremulous in the least. There was no show of nervous prostration, which necessarily would have followed being forcibly tied, hand and foot, as he said he was. His symptoms were not in keeping with a man who had been struck on the head a blow of sufficient violence to induce insensibility."

"Did you see anything else that struck you as singular after having heard Whittaker tell his story?"

"The cutting of his ears was hardly such as outside parties would have indulged in, and a somewhat remarkable circumstance in this connection was that his knife and a pair of scissors were within convenient reach."

"How about the cutting of his hair?"

"I am not a tonsorial expert; the fact that the hair cut from his head, which, however, was not very much in quantity, was carefully placed together on the floor, might, in some minds, give a problematical aspect to the case. It hardly seems probable that any midnight assailants seeking this as one of the modes of wreaking vengeance on their unconscious victim would have taken this extra pains in the matter. An ordinary mind might reasonably conclude that they would have scattered the capillary cuttings about as they would have scattered themselves at any outcry for help."

"How about the pillow under his head?"

"That, if done as stated, was an act of considerate kindness exceeding, under the circumstances, the limits of ordinary credulity."

"Having noticed all these facts what did you do?"

"I told Whittaker to get up and wash himself. He promptly did as told without the tremor of a muscle and then walked away evidently feeling as self satisfied as a man walking away from a bath. He said it was too late to take his breakfast in the mess-room, and guessed he would get his breakfast at the hospital. He guessed right, for he walked straight to the hospital and broke his fast with a hearty meal."

"So he was all right for duty?"

"I told him so. Except the cuts of his ears there was not a mark or bruise upon him, and this reminds me that he stated that one of the perpetrators broke the looking glass in his room over his head, striking it with the mirror down with great force. There was the looking-glass, the mirror broken into many pieces, as ocular proof of his statement; but not a piece of the shattered mirror had fallen out and neither was there the slightest mark or scratch on his forehead, where he claims to have been struck with it as he laid tied and helpless on the floor."

"What is your inference from this?"

"I have told you you must draw your own inferences. I am simply stating to you facts as they fell under my observation."

As will be seen, the statement of Dr. Alexander has most weighty significance, and in the nature of the case must be the most important that can be adduced in the forthcoming investigation. He said a great deal more, clinging with unwonted professional tenacity to his facts, but none of the leading and interesting points have been omitted.

Cadet Whittaker, in his examination after detailing the circumstances of the alleged outrage as first told by him, was asked what had been his personal feelings within a month as to the probability of his graduating, replied, "I always felt that I would get through." He said he never had any special cause for discouragement before this occurred. He was asked if he had ever written any gloomy letters to friends or others. He said he wrote a gloomy letter to his mother about her affairs preventing him from graduating. He told her unless he was sure she could find some way to pay her rent he would resign. He wrote another letter to a certain party, saying if he could not raise that money for his mother he would resign, when he received a letter in reply tendering money as a loan if he would pay it after he graduated. He accepted the offer, and the first installment came soon after; but this was weeks before the outrage occurred. An endeavor was made to connect him familiarly with a colored boot-black of the academy, but he testified that his last visits to that person's family was over a year ago. He testified that he had no reasons to suppose that there were prejudices in the minds of his instructors against him, and that he has a fair chance of getting through as far as they are concerned, but felt that his social isolation has had effect on him as far as his studies are concerned. When some of the pieces of belt with which he had been tied were shown the witness, it was revealed that one piece contained eyelets, which none but officers contained, and Whittaker had never been an officer. His counsel deemed this important. He also denied the ownership of the black necktie found in his room.

The inquiry was resumed this morning. Whittaker was recalled. He said he had no conversation with his assailants except to say "please do not cut my ear." He had been told that the gas was found lighted in the morning, but he had positively extinguished it before his retirement. When the surgeon aroused him, he thought his assailants had returned. The pen-knife and scissors found in his room he identified as his own. He was shown a white handkerchief, with a corner cut out, that was found in his room, but said he never saw it before Thursday last. During the examination he was taken into the ante-room, where the court examined his ears, ankle and head, and on his return, in answer to the question, said that in his opinion an oath was binding on his conscience to tell the whole truth, and that he firmly believed a false oath involved future punishment. The recorder then spoke to him as follows: "I want you to put your hand on that Bible, which you have so often read, and take oath that you are in no way cognizant, in no way a free agent, or have any knowledge or connivance with your assailants." Whittaker took the Bible, looked his questioner squarely in the face and was asked, "Do you take that oath?" He replied clearly and firmly, "I do, sir." His testimony afterwards was short. Then two barbers attached to the post were sworn in regard to the cutting of his hair, their evidence going to show that the small pair of scissors found in his room could not have cut his hair as it is now cut. When these witnesses finished, at the suggestion of Whittaker, the counsel for the latter withdrew, and then Cadet George R. Burnett, of the first class, was called to the witness stand.

Burnett's testimony showed that he was the officer of the day when Whittaker was found. He was the first one to enter the room, and called him repeatedly, but Whittaker made no answer. Witness then described the position in which he found Whittaker, his appearance and the condition of the room. Witness by direction laid himself on the floor by the blackboard and showed the position Whittaker was in when he first saw him; his feet were elevated and he lay partly on his side and it seemed almost impossible for Whittaker to have untied cords about his feet from the position that witness illustrated he was in, especially if his hands were firmly bound. He also exhibited how the knots were tied, showing there were more than one full knot, and the knots were of a character somewhat difficult to untie. Afterwards he tied his own wrists as he said Whittaker's were tied, and then broke the bonds, though the space between his hands after he was tied was two inches; whereas he testified that the space between Whittaker's hands was one inch, and his wrists two inches, which would make much difference in leverage when pulling laterally. In breaking the bonds witness suffered an abrasion of skin on both wrists. In appearance he is physically stronger than Whittaker by considerable. He was also bound hand and foot, as was Whittaker, and laid beside an iron bedstead, which had been brought into court; and his feet tied to it, when he showed that he could reach the knots on his feet with his hands.

It is proper to state that before Cadet Burnett was called to the witness stand, Whittaker, at the suggestion of his counsel, retired from the room, and was not present during Burnett's evidence. Adjourned.

DIX'S TORMENTER

Turns Out to be a Forger and a Thief.

NEW YORK, April 10.—Williamson, Dr. Dix's prosecutor, is now found to be a forger and swindler. Superintendent Taylor, of the postoffice, says in an interview:

"In December last Williamson wrote to Howard & Co., jewelers, of this city, under the name of Edward P. Adams, inclosing a draft for $3.80, drawn by the Pittsburg forge and iron company, and apprently indorsed by the payee over to Edward P. Adams.

This was to be paid for a gold chain which was to be sent to him at Pittsburg on approval. A chain was forwarded, but when Howard & Co. came to deposit the draft, they found that the indorsement was forged. Before this discovery was made, however, Williamson, or Adams, wrote another letter to the firm asking that they should send him a gold watch and several other articles of jewelry. This request was not granted.

"Howard & Co, say that Caldwell & Co, jewelers of Philadelphia, had been swindled by a person in Pittsburg under the same name. We ascertained that the report was correct, and to-day a representative of Caldwell & Co. identified a fine set of jewelry, sleeve buttons, etc., which had been found in Williamson's trunk, as the property of his employers. It is said that Williamson has swindled Caldwell & Co., to a large extent.

The drafts he used were mailed by the Pittsburg forge and iron company in the street letter boxes in Pittsburg, and while we have no possible proof on this point, it seems probable that Williamson fished the letters out of the boxes. About that time there were complaints that the street boxes in Pittsburg had been robbed, and there is little doubt that Williamson is the thief. If the charges can be brought home to him he can be prosecuted under the United States laws.

Cornelius's Trouble.

NEW YORK, April 9.—The supreme court, in general term, has affirmed the order of Justice Donahue refusing to grant the application of Cornelius J. Vanderbilt to have a person appointed in the place of William Vanderbilt as trustee of the fund of about $400,000, which was created by William H. Vanderbilt soon after the withdrawal of the contest of Commodore Vanderbilt's will. The judges add: "It seems almost incredible that counsel could be found capable of advising such application, having neither law nor facts to justify it. The application deserves nothing but severe rebuke."

Mr. Heap's Court.

Special dispatch to The Constitution.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 9.—An American citizen, accused of murdering a Turk, was recently tried before Mr. Heap, consul-general of the United States. He was found guilty of manslaughter and sentenced to two months imprisonment. Sawas Pasha, minister of foreign affairs, has protested against the right of the American consul to try the case and demands a surrender of the prisoner to the Ottoman authorities. Mr. Heap declines to surrender him.

A Norfolk Fire.

NORFOLK, VA, April 10.—A fire occurred in the Purcell house at 5:30 this morning, originating in a defective flue leading from the barbers' shop. The guests escaped without injury or loss; damage to the building and furniture about $9,000, covered by insurance. It is expected that the hotel will be open again in a few days.

Steadman's Suicide.

GALVESTON, April 10.—A Marshall special says that William Steadman, a law student, shot himself yesterday, because he failed to enter West Point academy some time ago.

To the People of Fulton County.

I have served you for a greater portion of my life. Since the war, that is for the last sixteen years, I have been your servant in the responsible position of ordinary of your county. Within that sixteen years I have never been called upon to answer a slander or to resent a serious insult until a portion of the grand jury, on last Friday evening, saw proper to reflect upon me in regard to the defalcation of our late tax-collector, Mr. Samuel R. Hoyle.

I will not bore you with but a few words, for I have too much faith in the intelligence of the people who have so long trusted me to believe that they will not put perfect confidence in what I may tell them. I will therefore not notice the more than contemptible fling that said jury saw fit to hurl at his excellency, the governor. He is, or should be, amply ably to take care of himself. I will confine myself to answering the charge preferred against me.

Any intelligent man, woman or child can see by reading said presentments that the said jury were totally ignorant of the facts in regard to the case. They do not seem to have made an honest endeavor to find out what the facts really were.

Now, I had a right to believe that Mr. Hoyle was an honest man, as he had been triumphantly elected to the office he held over all competitors, and that, too, against my protest, for I did not vote for him. The voters of Fulton county are responsible for his return to office.

As to his bond, I did approve it, and would no doubt do it again under similar circumstances, for I have no right under the law to impute perjury to any man. The gentlemen on his bond justified or swore to a certain amount of property—enough to cover the sum specified in the bond. What right had I then to say to those gentlemen that they were swearing to an untruth? My position and my regard for the courtesies due gentlemen, nor the law, gave me any such authority. The law does not compel officers to disregard the oath of a gentleman. If it gave me the authority to do so, I would not exercise such right.

Now in regard to the "delays of the tax-collector in making final settlement," and the "passing to the insolvent list the names of many well known to be solvent and without the entries of no property." The honorable gentlemen composing the jury, who make the strictures referred to well know that I myself called their attention to all the laws they quote or to which they refer, and also pointed out the defects in our tax laws and the almost utter impossibility of perfecting titles under tax sales. Hence, when property is offered for sale, under tax fi. fas. there are frequently no bidders and the tax fi. fas. are left in the hands of the officer with an addition of a bill of cost for levy and advertising. Hence the "delays of final settlement." In other words, we have practically tried to carry out the principles of the act of July 22d, 1879, in reference to insolvent tax lists in this county for many years, even before the said act was passed, and by referring to the books in the comptroller-general's office, the honorable gentlemen of the grand jury would have found that the insolvent lists of Fulton county are small, in comparison with other counties, in proportion to population and taxable property.

Besides, even after the insolvent lists are allowed it has always been the custom here to replace tax fi. fas. thought to be collected, in the hands of the sheriff for another trial.

In conclusion, lest I worry your patience, no one knows better than myself the trouble that the governor has had with Mr. Hoyle's bond. He has been required to strengthen it several times, either by his sureties desiring to come off or by the action of grand juries and myself. When my attention was last called to the bankruptcy of some of his sureties and the insufficiency of his bond, I immediately notified him in writing and by calling on him personally, that it must be strengthened. This I kept up under repeated assurances from him that he would comply until forbearance well nigh ceased to be a virtue. In the meantime he was by himself or his deputy, making what appeared to be full and fair weekly returns to the county treasurer, but which returns have proven to be not full. My only regret is that my foresight was not as good as my hind sight. Had such been the case, I would have urged the governor to declare a vacancy sooner than was done.

I call attention to the following certificate. Respectfully,

DANIEL PITTMAN,
Ordinary Fulton county.

ATLANTA, April 10, 1880.—We, the undersigned, certify that our offices are in the same room, No. 11 East Alabama street, with Samuel R. Hoyle, late tax-collector of Fulton county, and we know that he was notified by Daniel Pittman, ordinary of the county, that his bond was insufficient, and that said Pittman pressed him to strengthen his bond, and that Hoyle promised time and again to comply, and tried to get various persons to sign his bond in accordance with the order of the ordinary, even up to the time of his leaving the city.

AMOS FOX,
R. ADAIR,
H. S. ALEXANDER.

We, being cognizant of the facts, concur in the above statement.

ALL AROUND US.

ARREST OF A NOTED SCOUNDREL,

Who Raped a White Lady and Cut Her Tongue Out to Keep Her from Telling—The Late Storms—A Grand Event in Opelika—An Old Man's Death.

DALTON, April 9.—A gentleman brought from South Pittsburg, Tenn., this morning, a negro by the name of Sam Buchanan, who is alleged to have committed rape on a lady in Cedartown ten years ago, and also cut her tongue out to prevent her telling it. He took the negro to Rome to have him confined in jail until he (the captor) could go to Cedartown and secure the reward. A negro here by the name of Scott Pryor identifies the negro, saying he "knew Sam Buchanan twelve or fifteen years ago, and his (Scott Pryor's) young master (Mr. Jackson Pryor) afterwards bought the place on which the rape was committed." From what we could learn the wife of Tom Buchanan became angry with him for whipping one of his illegitimate children, and told on him, causing his arrest.——Mr. Pink Miller, one of the sufferers from the storm, reports that a Miss Summerour died from injuries received from a house falling on her.——It snowed two hours and a half here yesterday, but the ground was too wet to let it lay.

SPRING PLACE, April 8.—One of the most violent and destructive storms that has ever been known in Cherokee Georgia passed through Murray county on last Saturday night, April 3d. It occurred about 1 or 2 o'clock in the morning, and was accompanied by considerable rain and very heavy hail. The hail, which fell just before the most violent wind came, was in some instances as large as a man's fist, falling thick and fast, sometimes bursting shingles from the roofs of houses. The first effect of the storm is to be seen near Miller's ford, on the Conasauga river, in the northwestern portion of the county; proceeding from thence in an easterly direction across the county toward the Cohutta mountains, carrying destruction and death in its course. Dwelling-houses, churches, barns and houses of all kinds were, like playthings before the hurricane's wild march, sent crashing to the ground. Trees were uprooted and hurled precipitously to the earth, and hardly one is to be seen standing in its immediate track. Fences were swept away, in common with other things, as if they had been but straw, leaving whole plantations uninclosed. Three persons were killed and many others badly injured, and some doubtful of recovery. In addition to the dwelling-houses, barns and other houses being blown down, the contents of some of the houses were swept entirely away and cannot be found. Chairs, beds and bed-clothing are either entirely out of reach or are found a mile or two away, torn to pieces. Bed quilts, blankets and clothing of nearly every description can be found out on the mountain tops, hanging to the highest branches of the trees, waving in the wind as if in triumph at the victory of the storm. A hog was found hanging forty or fifty feet up in the fork of a tree, whither it had been sent by the fury of the storm. Others were blown into wells and some killed by fence-rails striking them and severing their bodies in twain. The number of houses blown down is not definitely known, but it is safe to say that there were not less than fifty dwelling-houses, besides the barns and other outhouses generally on the same premises. Many families are left almost destitute. The people of adjoining communities turned out en masse to assist their unfortunate and suffering neighbors, and are doing all that can be done to make them comfortable. Just two years ago, lacking only a few days, a storm of the same kind, though less destructive, passed across the county, but a short distance from the last one. The length of the hurricane's track is not known. The average width of the most violent portion is not more than one mile. It lasted but a few moments, and passed over with lightning speed. Generations yet unborn will see signs of its destructive work.

OPELIKA, ALA., April 10.—The grandest event of the season took place here last night. Dawson lodge No. 14, Knights of Pythias, gave a banquet at Renfroe's opera house, at which were fully 500 guests. There were about forty couples from West Point, and about the same number from LaFayette, Alabama, while a few from Columbus honored the occasion by their presence. The tables literally groaned under the many eatables prepared by these most hospitable Knights. They more than sustained their reputation for generosity, and benevolence. The band of Professor Card, from Columbus, made music for this vast company, and every one was enchanted with its sweetness. Carriages were rolling until a late hour this morning conveying the guests to their delayed slumbers. Every one present will long remember the occasion and will bless Dionysius who sorely troubled Damon and Phythias.——Political waters are becoming very much agitated in this county. We have forty candidates for the county offices, while almost every presidential candidate has his quota of workers. Tilden seems to be in the lead here, though Seymour, on account of John Kelly's bad humor, is highly regarded.

GREENESBORO, April 10.—Mrs. Harper, aged 94 years, died this morning at seven o'clock. She had been remarkably vigorous up to ten days before her death, when she began to fail and declined until her death.——Greene Barrett, colored, met with a painful accident yesterday by a fall from a horse, which he was galloping through the streets. The horse balked and ran against a butcher's stand, striking the man's shoulder violently, which lost him his balance, and he fell off, striking the face of a column near the ground, leaving the impression of four teeth in the wood half an inch deep. The teeth were were loosed from their sockets and one broken off. His injuries are not considered dangerous.

MADISON, April 10.—Mr. E. H. Cohen has been elected mayor of Madison, and Messrs P. S. Burney, E. Heyser, L. T. Pennick and Joseph Vason, aldermen to serve for the ensuing year.——Colonel D. S. Johnston, the new postmaster, has fitted up the new post-office in a most becoming style. Colonel Johnston has given our city a post-office arrangement which for convenience and appearance is one of the finest in the state, when we consider the size of our little city and its number of inhabitants. The Georgia female college, under the management of Professor R. T. Asbury, is progressing finely. Professor Asbury came among us but a few months ago, and in that short time has impressed our people with his eminent qualifications as a teacher.

DAHLONEGA, April 9.—Colonel Price, president of the Dahlonega Air-Line railroad, and Colonel Sage, engineer of the Atlanta & Charlotte Air-Line, were engaged Tuesday in examining the different approaches of routes leading from Potosi (Back Camp), the first station on the G. & D. R. R., to the Chestatee river. They found two available crossings for the bridge over said river—one at the lower end of the Wilson Furr farm, and the other at Bull Shoals, above Luther's ford—but what point will be adopted is not yet known. Colonel S., with his corps, will go into camp at Potosi on Monday next, and will go forward in the location of the road to the next station, which will likely be on the west bank of the river and called Chestatee. This section will soon be put under contract.

ATHENS, April 9.—H. R. Bernard fills the place of J. M. Edwards, superintendent of the Northeastern railroad temporarily.——The first snow this winter fell yesterday. The antics of amateur dancers under the care of Miss Glover, are remarkable to witness.

GRIFFIN, April 10.—There was a slight frost here this morning, but not enough to do any material damage to the fruit crop. A gentleman from Brooks Station informed me just now that the frost was heavier there than here, and that the fruit had probably been injured.——In the case of the State vs. J. C. Brantley, tried before the Carroll county superior court, the charge being murder, the jury brought in a verdict of "not guilty" this morning at 5 o'clock. The people are satisfied and sent up a shout for Brantley.

SPORTS OF THE DAY.

The End of the Walking Match, with the Nigger on the Woodpile.

NEW YORK, April 10.—At 8 o'clock, Hart, while on the last lap of his 559th mile, was presented by a quartette of ladies in one of the boxes with a handsome sash of red, white and blue silk, which was placed around his shoulders, and he then proceeded on his walk with the same graceful movement as at the beginning of the walk. At this time there were about 8,000 persons in the garden. At 8:11 the figures on the bulletin were announced, and Hart had completed his 560th mile, being 7¼ miles ahead of the best time on record. As he reached the scorer's stand he was halted and presented with a magnificent floral design, an arch springing from a bed of flowers. From the centre of the arch depended a pair of patent-leather shoes. With this gift resting on his shoulders, he in company with Allen, who had run down the track, and placed one shoulder under one side of the gift, circled the track amid the shouts and applause of the spectators. At 8:28 Hanwaker scored his 450th mile, thereby becoming entitled to a share of the gate money, which, however, will amount to about $53. During the evening Hart received from B. J. McSwyny, on behalf of an unknown, a challenge for the O'Leary belt. At 9:24 the heavy silver belt was taken from its case. Hart came down the stretch carrying a silk flag, while the band played "Yankee Doodle." Referee Custis fastened the broad plates of the belt around the young fellow's waist and amidst thunders of applause he rounded the track on the last lap of the greatest six days' walk that ever took place. He completed 565 miles and 165 yards at 9 o'clock, 24 minutes and 30 seconds. Allen made the greatest record for the last day, namely, 88 miles and 1 lap. The final score was Hart, 565; Pegram, 543 and 7 laps; Dobler, 531; Howard 534 and 5 laps; Allen, 525 and 2 laps; Khrone, 516; Williams, 509 and 5 laps; Hanawaker, 450 and 3 laps.

THE TURF.

NEW ORLEANS, April 10.—The fifth day of the races; the track heavy but the weather clear and pleasant; attendance large. The first race, purse $125, half mile, won by Miss Blanche by ten lengths. La Perichole second; Bessie Davis third, beating George S., Kitty, Hawk, and Benny, who fell before entering the home stretch. Time 54 seconds. In the pools on the track Miss Blanche and Bessie Davis stood $65; Benny $30; George S., $13; Kitty, Hawk and La Perichole $11.

Fourth race, purse $250, mile and three-quarter dash, was won by Long Tom; Ella Rowlett second, Typhoon third, Jim Fays last; time, 3:10. Long Tom won by half a dozen lengths, leading from the start. In the pools, Long Tom sold for $25 and the field for $10. General Grant was present at the races.

FRENCH BILLIARDS.

Special dispatch to The Constitution.

PARIS, April 10.—The Vignaux-Slosson billiard match commenced at 8:45 this morning at Cremorne hall. Piot and Thomas were chosen umpires. Slosson started with 1 point; Vignaux following with 2 points. The next break resulted in Slosson 32 and Vignaux 60. Slosson then made a run of 24, followed by a run of 422 by Vignaux, which was hailed with cheers. Vignaux's next largest break was 185. Slosson's largest break was 227 and 292. Vignaux's average was 185 and Slosson's 147. Both champions were loudly applauded. Vignaux made 800 points first, Slosson only scoring 624. There was considerable betting on the result. Many amateurs were present, including the prince of Wurtemburg. The game ended at 11:40 p. m., and will be resumed to-morrow evening at 8 o'clock.

CLUBBED TO DEATH.

A Horrible Tragedy in Virtuous New England.

Special dispatch to the Constitution.

NEWMARKET, N. H., April 10.—Yesterday afternoon while three little girls were gathering May flowers in the woods at Durham, N. H., they discovered the headless body of a young man nearly nude. The town authorities were immediately notified, and an investigation showed that a brutal murder had been committed, but by whom is as yet a mystery. The body was found lying face downward at full length, with both arms resting underneath and covered with his shirt. The right arm was severed from the body at the shoulders and the head had also been cut off and has not been found. About three hundred feet away the coat, pants and vests were found and in another direction, some twenty-five feet distant, a linen collar, cap, necktie and shirt bosom which had been torn completely off. There were three gold studs with garnet settings in the shirt bosom. The top part of the skull minus the hair over a space nearly as large as a saucer, and the murderer's oak club, also found in a little clearing. It is evident that here murder was committed. Several pieces of skull and brain were scattered about and torn clothing, all indicating the victim's struggle for life. The authorities are carefully investigating the matter. Great excitement prevails in the neighborhood.

CAPITAL TALK

HEARD IN THE CAPITOL CORRIDORS.

The Status of the Kellogg Case—A Georgia Scalawag Was in Full Blast—The Fight in the House Over the Army Bill—Colonel Mosby's Practical Patriotism.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—I telegraphed you last week that the Kellogg case would be called up last Tuesday, and so it would have been, but for the lengthened debate on the Indian bill. The case will certainly be called up next Tuesday. Senator Hill will close the debate. The case will probably consume the entire week, and may be run into the next. There is a disposition, however, on the part of some democrats to let this matter lay until after the fall election, which is not a bad idea.

The movement to hold an anti-third term convention in St. Louis on May 6th, by the republicans, is gaining ground and promises to be a meeting of formidable proportions. Nearly all of the northern states will be represented. New York and Massachusetts will be represented by some of the strongest republicans in that party. The object of the convention is to protest against the nomination of Grant as a nomination that would be hurtful to the country and fatal to the party. The object of the convention is not to impose any other man on the party. In response to letters inviting co-operation at St. Louis, some of the republicans write that they will not try to keep Grant from the nomination, but that if he is put on the party, they will crush him at the polls in November. As I telegraphed you yesterday, Grant will not be nominated. There is no chance to harmonize, and his best friends will not take the responsibility of insisting upon his nomination, with this formidable split staring the party in the face. I may not be a prophet, but some of the leading men of both parties think now that Grant will not be nominated, whereas a few weeks ago they thought differently.

The readers of THE CONSTITUTION will recollect that about a month ago Mr. Darnell, assistant United States district attorney, published an open letter stating his reasons for writing a favorable letter of Colonel Farrow to the department of justice. In that letter he held out to the public that he was above the conspiracy to injure Colonel Farrow, and that as an act of simple justice, unsolicited by Colonel Farrow, he felt called upon as an honorable man to state that the charges made against Farrow were prompted because he (Farrow) would not join the crusade against Marshal Fitzsimons; that the charges made against his personal and official character were untrue, etc. While he published this letter he has been writing letters to the attorney-general and the treasury department, abusing Farrow and charging him with neglect of duty. The occasion of a recent letter was the tendered resignation of Darnell. The result of these letters, taken in connection with the first letter written by Darnell, has materially strengthened Farrow, and I think he will be speedily reappointed. It is viewed now as a family row among republicans, and as no charges made against Farrow have been sustained, they have served to help him. Darnell's resignation has not been accepted, and it is not likely to be, as it is said Farrow is going to prefer charges against him for conduct unbecoming an officer and gentleman, and that he is guilty of falsehood in two or more of the letters he has written here. Farrow publicly proclaims his ability and readiness to fix the charge on Darnell as soon as the investigation is made. One of these letters, signed by Darnell, is said to be in the handwriting of a clerk in Collector Clark's office, which will add to the complication.

The postmaster-general has issued orders prohibiting the delivery of letters addressed to Tremont spoon company alias Wildes & Co., of Boston, on the ground that they are conducting a fraudulent business through the mails. For the last month they have flooded the south with their circulars.

Mr. Pat Calhoun, of Atlanta, is in the city en route for New York.

The fight the republicans are now making against the amendment prohibiting the use of troops at the polls is purely factious. The amendment now pending is the identical one that was put upon the army bill at the extra session, by way of compromise, which Mr. Garfield then supported by his vote and in an able speech. It will be remembered that last spring only eleven republicans voted against the army bill in the shape it finally took under this compromise. The stalwart republicans are now exasperated. They are mad at Garfield because he offered the amendment to the deputy marshal bill a few weeks ago. They propose to fight the amendment to the army bill for next year, as much to try to annoy him as for any other purpose. But how they propose to manage the thing, nobody can tell, because they are on the record almost as a body voting with him. When the question of how much time should be consumed in general debate came up, the democrats said they wanted no time at all. Atkins offered a resolution limiting general debate to four hours, giving all to the republicans. They fought this as too short a time, and pending the question the house adjourned. The democrats propose to sit still and laugh at the republicans. They do not care to discuss the proposition. All the sectional debate must come from the other side. Among the statesmen who think that they would make better leaders than Garfield and Kiefer, of Ohio, who give indication of leading off to-morrow against Garfield there comes Burrowes, of Michigan, Columbian orator. It remains to be seen whether Garfield will allow himself to be sat down on or not. The fact is that the little radical element that is fighting him does not understand the temper of the people. They want quiet and peace.

A private letter just received here from Colonel Mosby contains some additional comments in his peculiar style on the peculations and corruptions of Bailey, his predecessor, in the consulate at Hong Kong, and of other American consular officials in the east. Colonel Mosby turned over to the department on account of fees more than $11,000 for the first year of his incumbency, ending in February last which is several thousand dollars more than was returned by Bailey during the same period He says that on account of the great expense of living, there is not much inducement to an honest man to accept the position of United States consul. He seems to think that his efforts in behalf of an honest administration of the United States consulates and of the exposure of corrupt officials have not been appreciated, for he says that he has received several rebukes from the department of state, but not one word of encouragement. He then says: "The reasons why I have not returned are these: I have been threatened with dismissal for uncovering frauds out here, and I want to give the administration an opportunity of carrying out their threats, and thereby signalizing their zeal for civil service reform by punishing the only man whom they have appointed to office who has tried to reform it. I continue to hold the fort here because I have not yet completed my investigations, and if I were to resign now and go home the ring would claim it as a victory for the thieves, and say that I resigned under compulsion. I shall show them that I will remain as long as I choose." The frankness with which Mosby (who will be remembered as the notorious guerrilla) has criticised the president and Secretary Evarts, and other of his superior officers, has not been at all relished by them, and has been very destructive to discipline, but there is no doubt he has done much good in uncovering frauds which have been practiced for a long time by American consuls in China. He has carried on his investigations in the guerrilla fashion, and the good he has done would have been approved had he used somewhat more discretion in his methods.

The democratic senators met in caucus at 10½ o'clock this morning, and remained in session until 2 o'clock p.m. The question of taking up the Spofford-Kellogg case was the subject under consideration, and the discussion continued with a good deal of animation and spirit, Messrs. Bayard, Lamar Garland, Kernan and others spoke against the present consideration of the Kellogg case, while Messrs. Saulsbury, Hill, Vance and Jonas again insisted that it ought to be brought before the senate for action without delay. The arguments pro and con were much the same as those of yesterday and day before, except that even more determination was shown to-day by the advocates of immediate action. It was also openly suggested that the proposition to unseat Kellogg and seat Spofford could not be adopted because there were democratic senators who would vote against it. Mr. Hill said: "Very well, let them vote against it." The committee had done its duty and it now remained for the senate to perform its duty, no matter what the vote might be. He insisted upon the case being disposed of, and in regard to its possible effect upon the presidential election, said that it ought not to deter the senate from disposing of the case.

Finally a resolution was adopted by a majority of three, providing that the Geneva award bill shall be taken up first and shall be considered from day to day until disposed of, and that then the chairman of the elections committee may call up the Kellogg case, unless in the meantime a democratic caucus should decide otherwise. The caucus this morning was not fully attended, and it was understood that another shall be held before the final disposition of the Geneva award bill, to pass finally upon the question of the consideration of the Kellogg case. This was a sort of compromise and it was consented to in the hope of bringing about a better feeling on this question than now exists. It is the understanding that the final decision shall be made by a full vote of all the democratic senators if it can be obtained.

In Congress.

THE HOUSE.

On motion of Mr. Wood the house concurred in the senate resolution, providing for the appointment of two members of the senate finance committee and the house ways and means committee, as a joint committee to take into consideration the alleged loss of revenue arising from the evasion of tax on cigars and other articles subject to excise duty, and what remedy can be provided by law.

The house then having dispensed with the morning hour, at 12:35 went into a committee of the whole, Mr. Springer in the chair on the army appropriation bill, and a general debate was commenced upon the amendment prohibiting the use of troops at the polls as a police force.

Mr. Sparks opened the discussion. He called the attention of the house to the fact that this identical clause had already been added to the appropriation bill. It made a prohibition of the use of army, on the contingency that the appropriation should not apply if the army were used in a certain way. He had understood that the great leaders on the other side had acceded to the amendment. The vote upon the amendment had shown that but twelve republicans had voted against it. He confessed that the amendment did not meet his views. This tame, cowardly amendment did not come up to that standard of legislation on the subject that he would have wished, and if he had the power he would insist on something much stronger than this, and unyieldingly insist on its adoption. He would wipe out this un-American, republican, undemocratic, villainous statute which owed its existence to the inspiration of fanaticism and to an era of hate.

Mr. Conger—Will the gentleman state on what side hate and fanaticism was?

Mr. Sparks, (not noticing the question,) It disgraces the statute books and insults the sovereign people of this country. With this, I am done.

Mr. Conger—Does the gentleman intend to answer where fanaticism was?

Mr. Sparks—I am not answering questions.

Mr. Conger (sarcastically)—I will venture to say that the gentleman may answer without being in danger of being shot on the spot.

The general debate was continued by Mr. Hawley, of Connecticut, who twitted the democratic party upon their evident intention not to participate in the debate, sarcastically inquiring whether it was afraid that it would bring about the election of General Grant, or whether the stentorian tones of the whisperer of Gramercy park had prohibited discussion.

Mr. Robesan, of New Jersey, followed with a strong speech in opposition to the amendment, contending that it meant that military power should not be subordinate to civil power.

Messrs. Kiefer, McCoid, Haskell and Frye also spoke against the clause and all of the gentlemen endeavored to draw the democrats into a debate, but they remained silent. Mr. Conger railed at the democrats for what he called their cowardice, their paralysis, their dumbness and their unwillingness to debate the pending question. Without action the committee arose, and at 5:10 adjourned.

MEDICAL VANDALS.

Disturbing the Resting Places of the Dead.

Special dispatch to The Constitution.

NEW YORK, April 10.—A Syracuse special telegram tells the story of a farmer named Rufus G. Barnard invoking the aid of the police in that place to search for the body of his brother, who died in the county poor-house and had been buried in the cemetery attached to the institution. The grave was found desecrated and the body subsequently discovered at the medical college attached to the Syracuse university. The brother of the deceased recognised his remains. They were removed by the undertaker. In plain sight of all present were corpses of two women and a child, weighted down with stones in pickle tanks. Parts of half a dozen other bodies similarly disposed of in another room adjoining. An investigation at the poor-house cemetery has shown that other graves have probably been tampered with by the students. Several were found where the earth at the head was loose and depressed.

THE LINGERING STAY

OF WINTER IN THE LAP OF SPRING

Calls Forth a Few Remarks from Bill Arp, Wherein He Indulges in Reflections Suitable to the Season and its Exigencies—Pulling the Calf's Tail, Etc.

Written for The Constitution.

Winter still lingers in the lap of spring. I dont blame the old gentleman for setting there as long as she will let him, but I wish he would make haste and go. This coquetting of youth with old age is amusing for a little while, but we can get sick of it quicker than anything in the world. I never see an old gray-headed widower making a fool of himself about a young woman but what I think of winter trying to wed the buds and blossoms of the spring. I never hear of a nice young girl marrying an old man for his money but what I think of the same thing. How his cold breath freezes on her warm lips and his thin and icy arms chills the blood that courses in her youthful veins! Such things will happen, and I cant help it; but it always makes me sad. At such times I want to be young and rich and marry her myself, just out of pity. Its so unnatural and out of season. "Oh, the snow, the butiful snow," somebody said, but it's not butiful to me now. I'm thinking of the wheat in the boot, and the early corn, and potatoes, and the fruit crop. I never did like a north wind in the spring of the year. Its shore to bring a cold sickly rain, or a snow, or a sleet, or something. Its an ill wind that comes to us from that quarter anyhow. They never blow any thing kind or refreshing, and I reckon would freeze us to the vitals if they could.

We thought the spring had come, and the birds and the trees, and the flowers, and the turkey hens, and the little wrens that are building their nests in the porch thought so too. But its a great mistake. The carpets have been taken up a little ahead of time, and the children have had to put on their shoes and stockings again. We've done cleaned up the premises once—a regular spring rejuvenation—raking and burning and white-washing outdoors, and scouring, and cobwebbing, and quicksilvering indoors. Besides it being a fit and proper time for it, we were expecting company, and so I was gently put in harness and went to work with a will. My wife wanted the front walk bordered with nice, shapely rock, and a ditch cut wide enough to fill up with rich soil all sifted fine for the flower seed When I had finished that job she had me to white-wash the rock and sow the seed, and then she wanted two or three little circular holes dug and filled up in the same manner, and I did it so nice she wanted two or three more, and kept on wanting until she got to nine, and then she said the dog would be capering all over them in the night, and I had to split up 144 little sticks and stake the dog out, and then she wanted enough of those beautiful wild lilies from the swamp to border a terrace, and they had to be spaded up with enough earth to keep em from knowing they had been moved. Its a good idea not to let a man know the extent of his job; when I look around the front yard and survey the amount of work that has been so quietly drawn out of me, I feel proud of my labors and amazed at my docility. It seems to me now that it's all done; everything is done; but I reckon not—I reckon not. Mrs. Arp has got some more developments stowed away in her fertile brain which will come forth in due time. She wont tax me beyond endurance. She will temper the wind to the shorn lamb. I very frequently feel like I was a lamb. But then she pays well—pays promptly, not in filthy lucre but in smiles and grateful looks—not in romantic rhapsodies or gushing torrents, but in that calm and serene glow of satisfaction which lights up her appreciative countenance and makes me feel proud to do her bidding. Some folks would rather hear a woman exclaim, "Oh! my—how lovely—how beautiful—exquisite—splendid—best man in the world—come, let me kiss you, you dear old feller." I dont think I would like that. I reckon not, though, as it was never tried on me; I cant say for certain—may be I would.

Everything around and about our premises is mighty clean and nice now. I wish it would stay so. I don't care so much about it myself, but it harmonizes with Mrs. Arp and the girls and the scriptures. I'm afraid I am a little heathenish about such things, for I dont like to live under such constraint—to have to scrape my shoes so much and shut the doors and hang up my hat and empty the wash-bowl. I don't like to see the ashes taken up quite so clean and so often and so much sweeping and scrubbing. I dont think the broom ought to be set in the corner upside down nor the clean towel hid in the washstand where me and the little boys cant find it. I think I would like a room somewhere close about where me and the children could do as we please and enjoy a little dirt on the floor and throw the saw and the hammer and a few nails around and kick off our muddy shoes and mould bullets and pop corn and play horse and marbles and tumble up the bed and do as we please and clean up things about once a month. But there's no room to spare and so I have to endeavor to live like a gentleman whether I want to or not. I've got an idea that a little clean dirt is healthy. I'm afraid that little tender children are washed and bathed too much. They get puny, and pale, and delicate. Poor little things. Its very disagreeable to em. I never saw one that liked it, and thats pretty good evidence its not according to nature. Once a week is very reasonable, but this every night's business is a sin. They say it keeps the pores open, but maybe they oughtent to be kept open all the time. The surgeons say that a handful of fresh earth bound on a flesh wound or a bruise will cure it up, and I've found out that the best cure for scratches in horses feet is walking in fresh plowed ground. I never saw a healthy child that dident love to play in the dirt, and the sand, and make frog houses and mud pies. But still I don't go to extremes. I don't want em to get so dirty their skin hasent got any pores at all and their little ears would sprout turnip seed. Everything must be done in reason and in season. There's some things I am mighty particular about—such as clean dishes and butter and milk and sausage-meat. I saw a woman milking the other day, and she pulled the calf away by the calf's tail and then wiped off the cow's tits with the cow's tail and went to milking. I thought there was too little water and too much tail in that, though I reckon it's none of my business. Everybody has to eat their peck of dirt, they say; but I don't want mine in butter.

BILL ARP.

Mrs. E. B. Turner.

"The fever called life is over at last,
And sickness and sorrow forever are past."

On the morning of the 16th of March, 1880, there entered the portals of the "golden gate" which leads to eternal rest, one of the representative women of the days that are past and gone. The loftiest soul, the purest heart, the most spotless life, marked her course. To few indeed have been given to such an extent that rare combination of tenderness and wisdom which tend to make a perfect woman. Her very purity of character and integrity of purpose seemed to broaden her charity for the weaker of her race. Without arrogance, free from ostentation, and strong of will, she moved on her way, strengthening with her strength and binding broken hearts with her tenderness and compassion. May the impress of her pure and lofty spirit pass never away from those of us who owed her most and loved her best.

FOR THE LADIES.

One of Their Favorite Resorts.

The ladies of Atlanta have made Dougherty's one of their favorite resorts. It is the subject of their constant conversation when the fashions are discussed and they always know that, they can find whatever is new and excellent in dry goods at this emporium. Several days during the past week the forty employes of this large store have been as busy as bees displaying the beautiful lines of dress goods which are now in great demand. The variety and beauty of the styles is ahead of past seasons and there were never so many temptations for female tastes as at present. Mr. Dougherty has had a special view to the wants of the Atlanta trade and has succeeded in procuring a stock which few houses anywhere can excel. Every advantage he has obtained by his great purchases and thorough acquaintance with the trade is offered to his customers We know of a great many instances where people who do not reside in Atlanta send their orders here to be filled at this superb establishment. Its fame is wide extended, and has been justly earned.

Mr. Dougherty has devoted himself as thoroughly as a man can to his business, and his constantly increasing success is his reward. During the past week he has received a great many novelties and a fine supply of staple goods. His dress goods are exquisite for variety and beauty, and his general supply of dry goods, notions and novelties as excellent as we have ever seen in the south.

GONE TO CHATHAM.

Colonel Bryant, of Skowhegan, Leaves Us.

Mr. Bryant, of Skowhegan, left on Friday afternoon for Savannah. Rumor has it that this dismantled and distinguished statesman is bound for a radical convention which will meet there to-morrow. It is said that the nomadic gentleman, having signally failed to hug his way through the colored brothers of Fulton into the proud position of delegate, now aspires to entwine in his fickle arms the dark voters along the Savannah with a view to making his bow before the republican convention in this city on the 21st ultimo, as the delegate from Chatham.

The man from Skowhegan should remember that he who nestles upon the perspiring breast of Africa can never hope to give forth the perfume of Arabia. Like the vase in which roses have once been distilled, you may break, you may shatter J. E. if you will, but the scent of the negro will hang round him still.

And if beaten in Chatham, as he was in Fulton, he need not despair, for steeped in the deliciousness of that never-failing aroma, he can snap his fingers at the delegates elect and truthfully exclaim: "My rank is as high as the strongest sent."

Art Matters.

To the enthusiastic efforts of a young painter is Atlanta indebted for a genuine art movement, the result of which must in time be the organizing of an academy of design, with its trustees and corps of professors, its casts from the antique, its schools of painting, modeling, and of wood carving. Loan exhibitions and societies of decorative art have already sprung here and there in the larger cities. The woman's society of decorative art, the parent society, has an official journal published fortnightly, which is doing wholesome, vigorous work away from its home city. Our people are decorating their homes, pursuing the different branches of art, but what is wanted is united effort, to bring success.

Mr. Moser's art reception was the first thing of the kind ever ventured upon here, and was a complete success. The many ladies and gentlemen who attended were one in their expressions of good will and interest in the art revival. "You are laying the foundation of a great Atlanta school of design that is to come," exclaimed a lady prominent in society here. We join heartily in the movement, and hope the day for organization is not far off.

An Indian Fight.

SANTA FE, N. M., April 9.—Information received at military headquarters states that General Hatch with a part of his command attacked 300 Indians who were encamped in the San Andreas mountains. The fight lasted six hours, when the Indians retreated leaving their dead behind. Captain Henry Carroll, of the 9th cavalry, and seven soldiers were severely wounded. A large amount of stock was captured from the Indians, who are supposed to be Mescalero Apaches, as they retreated towards the Mescalero Apache agency. Hatch with his command is in pursuit.

The Price of Coal.

We are authorized by Governor Brown to state that the price of coal under the reduction agreed upon by himself, Mr. Newcomb and Colonel Wadley will be 13½ cents to manufacturers, instead of 12 cents, and 15 cents to the trade, instead of 14 cents.

The figures used in our article of yesterday were obtained from Mr. Stablman, general freight agent of the Louisville and Nashville road, and as he had been present when the rates were fixed, we deemed his figures reliable.

Locomotive Firemen.

Mr. Stephens, of Ohio, has been in Atlanta for the past two days for the purpose of organizing a lodge of the "Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen." The Atlanta lodge was established Friday night under flattering auspices. The objects of the order are purely benevolent. It is a sort of mutual aid association for the benefit of members and their families. There is none of the "strike" spirit in the organization, and it is heartily approved by railroad officials generally.

The Everetts.

This wonderful family closed their engagement in this city last evening and left for Charlotte, N. C., where they open on Monday evening. We commend them wherever they may go as the best in their line that ever visited Atlanta.

The Constitution.

ATLANTA, GA., APRIL 11, 1880.

An anti-third term convention, to be composed entirely of republicans, is called to meet in St. Louis on the 6th of May. How imposing this convention will be remains to be seen, but it is not likely to have any appreciable influence upon the Chicago convention. There may be a republican bolt, but it is doubtful. The outlook now is that the third-term boom is nearly as large as the party, which is made up for the most part either of people who hold office or who think their chances would be good under a Grant administration. The respectability of Massachusetts republicanism, for instance, will never be heard of in the Chicago convention.

That the fight which the house republicans have begun in opposition to the amendment to the army bill, prohibiting the use of troops at the polls as a police force is purely factious and for the purpose of precipitating a sectional debate, is shown by the fact that the clause is in precisely the words of the present law which was approved by Mr. Hayes during the extra session when his vetoes were flying thick and fast. In these vetoes he clearly conceded the right of congress to declare for what purpose the money appropriated by it should be used, and he approved the army bill when it came before him with this amendment. It is hinted that this opposition comes from the more stalwart republicans, first, to help the third term movement, and, second, to humiliate Garfield.

There is deep trouble among the republican brethren in Georgia, deeper, indeed, than a casual observer would suspect. First, there is a wholesome desire among the colored voters to crawl from under the thumbs of the white republican office-holders. Second, there is a natural desire on the part of some of these office-holders to retain their influence and to be conspicuous in the work of leading the colored people into the Sherman camp. Third, there is an attempt on the part of a few non-office-holding republicans to carry the Georgia delegation for Blaine. As may be supposed the clashing of these conflicting interests occasions more fuss than emptying a bag of marbles on a tin roof. There was a meeting of the colored voters in McIntosh county last month to select delegates to Atlanta, and one Styles L. Hutchins was chosen. The chairman of the county committee, however, called another meeting for yesterday, in which he states that Hutchins packed the previous meeting in his own interests, and that the true voice of the party was not heard. Therefore, there will be a contesting delegation from McIntosh. The question arises, who is Styles L. Hutchins? Is he the inimitable Styles so well known in Atlanta? We seem to see in this shrewd work in McIntosh the fine Ethiopian hand of Blaine's chief and only colored fugleman in Georgia, and it also gives us an inkling of how Morgan county was carried for Mulligan's man. The provincial darkies really have no sort of show against the impetuous political proclivities of Atlanta's Styles Hutchins.

Correcting an Impression.

We find the following in the Bainbridge Democrat: "The Atlanta Constitution seems now to favor the nomination of Mr. Jewett. Our impression "has been all along that this leading "southern daily was for Tilden. Impressions, however, are sometimes erroneous. The Constitution has great influence, and is edited with remarkable "ability, and Jewett may well feel proud "to number it among his supporters." Our esteemed contemporary is so accustomed to seeing the daily papers devote themselves to personal partisanship and assume infallibility that he is naturally somewhat confused at the simple impartiality of The Constitution. He is so accustomed to seeing newspapers perform the feat of "taking sides" in the discussion of questions of party policy that in correcting one erroneous impression he seizes upon another. The Constitution is in favor of no particular democratic aspirant as against all others. We have discussed Mr. Tilden's relations to the party with some candor, going so far as to say that if he could demonstrate his ability to carry New York, his chances for the nomination ought, under all the circumstances, to be better than those of any other candidate. Mr. Jewett's prospects we have discussed as a matter of interest to our readers, but The Constitution is not for Tilden, nor Jewett, nor Thurman, nor Field, nor Davis, or any other democratic aspirant. It is for the nominee of the Cincinnati convention, first, last and all the time; and if we have seemed to interest ourselves in Mr. Tilden's behalf it was simply and solely for the purpose of showing that there is no element of opposition to him as the candidate of the party among Georgia democrats.

Protection and Tariff Reform.

There can be no doubt that the utterly blind and foolish action of the protectionists in antagonizing every effort in the direction of a reasonable reform in the present tariff system has opened the eyes of the people as no argument could, not only as to the intentions of those who get the benefit of the subsidies wrung from the tax-payers, but as to the practical effect of protection. The attitude of those who are opposing the reasonable reduction of specific duties which has been proposed in congress is utterly indefensible. They have no ground to stand upon. They have deliberately and wilfully neglected to seize upon the only opportunity they are likely to have for some time to come, of commending in some degree the system of protection, so-called, to the toleration of the people. Perceiving this, the Chicago Inter-Ocean comes forward with an essay on protection, which it proceeds to define as follows:

> Duties on imports for the sake of protection to home industry cannot be rightly or fully considered, when limited to the idea of taxes. Such duties are much more than taxes; for they interpose an insurmountable obstacle between foreign encroachment and labor, capital, skill, and enterprise at home. This barrier element does not at all enter into taxes per se. Domestic industry is not benefited by duties which are taxes, pure and simple—by taxes, under the name of import duties, on such luxuries of manufacture or of agriculture as the country cannot produce for its consumption. Import duties rise above the nature of mere taxes only when they shield internal production from external harm. Tariff protection, therefore, is totally misunderstood and fatally abused, when it is reasoned upon, or employed, as identical with taxation. By protection we mean needed defense of individual enterprise whose success is the common interest of the community. Moreover, protection aims at, addresses all its measures and methods to, the defense of the industry engaged in the production of a commodity liable to be repressed or crippled by an excess of foreign competition. Looking steadily to the fullest employment of its own labor, and to the greatest practicable development of its native resources, including raw materials, available capital, skill and enterprise, and the most judicious enhancement, tariff protection turns away from all other aims and avoids all their complications; and at least so far as original purpose is concerned, has nothing to do with market prices except as these affect productive power, and act upon consumption. The rule of the principle controls the foreign manufacturer and the American importer with the fixed design to secure the right of domestic labor in the production of the specified article against all external disadvantages, and lays on any duty, large or small, high or low, which will accomplish that.

All this is delightfully vague, but it only lacks the rancor which it was the habit of Horace Greeley to inject into discussion of this sort to make it as notable as any argument that has ever yet been employed in behalf of protection. At any rate, it is notable enough to suggest an investigation. Will the Inter-Ocean, in the first place, kindly mention some American industry needing protection that is not now protected? Will it not, in the second place, and still as kindly, mention some protected industry that is not in effect a monopoly? And will it not generously point out one monopoly that will be injured in the slightest degree by a reasonable reduction of the import duties levied at a period when the government was compelled in a great measure to look to its custom-houses for its revenues?

It is needless to say that the Inter-Ocean will do nothing of the kind. To ask the questions is to answer them. If there ever was a time when any particular American industry needed protection—that is to say, if there was ever a time when it was necessary to tax the people to build up any particular industry, that time has long since past. That which is falsely called protection is simply a levy of taxes upon the people to furnish subsidies for monopolies which have recently made manifest the fact that they can be violently aggressive when occasion requires it. The real protection to American industries has been the genius of American invention and the natural resources of the country. There is not an American industry now enjoying the subsidies of a protective tariff that cannot compete with foreign rivals on their own ground and in their own markets. There is not a protected interest in the country whose resources and facilities in the way of machinery and equipment are not superior to those of any European rival. The protected interests have not only become monopolies, but they have formed themselves into associations, and thus have the market completely at their mercy. They do not give the people the benefit of competition, but by associating themselves together they dictate the prices which consumers shall pay. That a policy which has built up such arrogant and powerful monopolies as these finds defenders among honest men who are capable of reasoning intelligently upon other subjects is a mystery which will probably never have a satisfactory solution; and it does seem to us that with the facts staring him in the face, the editor of the Inter-Ocean must be convinced that a discussion of the question of protection necessarily involves the question of taxation—not to say spoliation.

It is impossible, however, to pin a protectionist down to a serious discussion of the question in any shape. Only a little while ago, the Inter-Ocean quoted the enhanced price of quinine, occasioned by an extraordinary demand from Russia, to show the effect of free trade in that article, the logical conclusion being that protection really established low prices. We endeavored to show at the time, that although just such an argument was never before conceived, it was really an admission that free trade would protect the weaker industries by enabling them to secure larger profits for their wares. Fortunately, the result of the opposition of the protectionists to a reasonable reduction of an outrageously burdensome tariff will open the eyes of the people to the real nature of protection. We invite the Inter-Ocean and all other protectionist organs to proceed with their arguments. The more the matter is discussed the more flagrant will the outrage of the system appear.

George Francis Train will keep on fooling around until some serious citizen evolutes him with the butt-end of a brogan.

Joaquin Miller has a new wife. There will be a honeymoon, a season of suspense, a separation, and then more poetry. There are two things a wild western poet must have—longitude and latitude.

John Sherman's portrait which the newspapers are publishing is another strong argument in favor of original sin. It is enough to make the man look puckered.

The sub-editors of the Burlington Hawkeye complain that the postmaster at that points fails to deliver The Constitution promptly. This state of affairs is very flattering to us. The Burlington postmaster is a man of great discrimination.

It is not too late for Mr. Tilden to engage John Kelly for the season.

If the democrats carry the next house of representatives, the election of committee-packer will probably be closely witnessed by tariff reformers. If the committees are to be packed, they should be packed in the interest of the people. This is reasonable.

The fact that Grant had money enough left to get out of Texas, shows what a strong financial backing he has.

It is meet that a country subject to epistolary visitations from Montgomery Blair should be informed that Mahmoud Jan is still in good health. We do not know who Mahmoud Jan is, but his name seems to have some political significance.

Bob Ingersoll has met his match at last. A man who went to hear one of his lectures recently has become a lunatic.

Even if Mr. Tilden retires, the question is, will John Kelly's native stoicism allow him to desert Mr. Conkling? Having been the means of turning New York over to Conkling, would it be wise in John to desert his powerful ally?

It is a pity that it should devolve upon as puny a man as Bill Chandler to carry Blaine's gonfalon through the Mammoth cave of American politics.

The man who turned off the gas in Houston should also be compelled to turn it off in Chicago. Only in this way can he convince the country that he is not a fiend who desires to perpetuate sectionalism, or words to that effect.

Grant said "no," but reflecting a few moments, remarked, without the shadow of a smile, "but I think I recollect the dun horse."

Blaine's Gifts.

New York Nation.

We are unable to recall any case besides Mr. Blaine's in which a conspicuous politican has deliberately taken the nurturing of domestic hatred a his sole mission in the politics of his country. For, unhappily, Mr. Blaine's sole mission it must be considered. He is striving hard for the presidency, and has for many years occupied prominent positions in both branches of the national legislature, and yet we know of no opinion looking to the constructive work of government which he has preached or with which he is identified. We know of no bill affecting any great public interest which he has introduced, debated instructively, or amended. We do not know, and we do not believe anybody else knows what his views are about any of the problems, such as currency, taxation or administration, now pending or impending. On none of these subjects has he rendered any aid in forming or moulding public opinion. None of his friends, in fact, make any claims of this kind for him. No account of his services in this field has been published or promised. No speech of his on any of them has been reprinted, is ever recalled or quoted.

Grant's Politics.

Cincinnati Gazette, rep.

Equally politic was he in the other expressions of this speech, in giving the assurance that instead of being the strong man who was to hold down the south with an iron hand, as he was stalwartly represented in the north, he intended an administration which should obliterate all sectional divisions by leaving the south free from interference by the national government, and the southern states as having the same privileges, immunities, and dignities as the northern. Since General Grant has thus laid down his platform to the southern people, and has founded it on an eternal principle it seems to be proper that the talk of the necessity to nominate him to keep down the south with the iron hand should cease. He has plainly expressed that he has no such idea, and that his policy would be to conciliate the ruling class of the south by ceasing all interference with their domination.

A Shameless Confession.

Cincinnati Enquirer.

John Sherman, candidate for the presidency, in his Mansfield speech on Wednesday night, made a shameless confession, and announced a vicious purpose touching the character of the supreme court of the United States. In the midst of his passionately partisan harangue, he practically confessed that the supreme court, as at present constituted, is a partisan republican court, and he pleaded for the election of a republican president chiefly for the purpose of making it so. This shows John Sherman's fitness to be president of the United States, and it also indicates the deep, determined plan of the republican party to keep, if possible, their anti-republican, anti-democratic, anti-constitutional idea enthroned upon the supreme bench.

The Heavy Villain.

Cleveland Herald, rep.

"The West Point outrage" has got into congress and Cadet Whittaker is liable to become famous. Mr. McCook introduced a resolution in the house of representatives yesterday to have the matter investigated. The strong probability, however, is that the trouble will be settled by the discovery that Cadet Whittaker is the only heavy villain in the case, a discovery that would result in the prompt removal of Mr. Whittaker to civil life.

An Impartial Example.

Darien Gazette

We most respectfully beg to differ with our esteemed contemporaries of the Macon Telegraph and the Savannah News, in regard to Tilden's strength in Georgia. We believe that a majority of the people are in favor of the nomination of Tilden. Let these papers follow the example of The Atlanta Constitution and take an impartial census of the prominent democrats of their sections. That is the only way to get at the matter.

Symptoms of Relentlessness.

Burlington Hawkeye.

The Hawkeye received many flattering congratulations upon its success as a democratic organ pro tem. But we confess it was an awful strain on the nervous system, besides several sundered chords in the conscience. Hereafter this paper will be devoted to fostering the Grant boom and laboring with our misguided Atlanta contemporary.

Your Uncle Samuel.

Bainbridge Democrat.

The machine managers just now seem to have "the drop" on Mr. Tilden. It looked something the same way for Andrew Jackson just preceding his second nomination. Don't be uneasy, Uncle Sammy—the people are with you.

A Cruel Fact.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Glancing at Mr. Groesbeck's recent letter, the able editor of the New York Sun remarks: "Another presidential fire-fly emits his light and expires." This is cruel, but it seems to fit the case.

Political Precipitation.

Philadelphia Times.

One of Mr. John Kelly's newspapers in New York seems to have acted rather precipitately in withdrawing Tilden from the contest. Tilden himself doesn't remember that he has withdrawn.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

The Grand Jury Presentments.

Grand Jury Room, April 8, 1880.

We, the grand jury, chosen and sworn for the first and second weeks of the spring term, 1880, of the superior court of Fulton county, beg leave to make the following presentments:

We find the jail kept in a measurably cleanly condition, but would suggest additional cleanliness, which, we think, would add greatly to the health and comfort of the prisoners, and that a reduction in the number of United States prisoners now confined there would be advisable. The diet is ample in amount and of sound quality. The roof of the jail has numerous leaks, needing immediate attention. We recommend that iron grating, which was recommended to the ordinary by the grand jury of the spring term, 1879, be put near the door, inside the prison hall, to prevent the possibility of the prisoners escaping while the jailor is opening and loosing the door. We take great pleasure in commending the taithful and devoted attention of the prison physician, Dr. J. M. Boring, to the sick.

Our committee on public roads report that so far as their observation and information extends the roads are generally in bad condition and need prompt attention on the part of the proper authorities.

We have made no examination of the books of the officers of the county, a committee appointed by the court being already engaged in that important work. We are informed that the grand jury of the fall term, 1879, of the superior court called the attention of the governor and of the ordinary to the insufficiency of the sureties on the bond of Tax Collector S. R. Hoyle, and the imperative necessity, in order to save the state and county from possibility of loss therefrom, that it be promptly and amptly strengthened.

We regret to say that this was not done, and that the tax collector is a defaulter in large amounts to both state and county in accordance with the report of the committee and the statement of the comptroller-general. The amount of the default to the county by the report of the committee is shown to be $16,124.07.

We also find that the ordinary is guilty of gross violation of his official duty in allowing unlawful delays in making final settlement of the tax due the county, and in passing to the insolvent list the names of many men known to be solvent and without the entries of proper legal officer of "no property," as required by act number 34, approved July 22d, 1879, on the fi. fas. submitted to him. The insolvent list of 1877, was thus allowed December 2d, 1879, and that of 1878—March 28th, 1880.

In view of such misconduct of the ordinary to the great damage of the county, we would urge the solicitor to institute such legal proceedings against him as he may deem best for the interest of the public.

We would also earnestly request His Honor, Judge Hillyer, and the Solicitor-General, Mr. Hill, to co-operate with the members of the next legislature from this county in framing a bill to be presented to the legislature for the better protection, by suitable bond and penalties, of the vast interests entrusted to ordinaries—no bond except that of one thousand dollars for clerk in their own court being now required of ordinaries, nor proper penalties affixed to official negligence and other misconduct on their part. We recommend that the clerk be required to enter upon the minutes of the court the general presentments of this and all grand juries hereafter, and to keep the original on file in his office, and we further recommend that these presentments be published in the Atlanta Daily Constitution.

In taking leave of the court we desire to express our thanks for many courtesies and kindnesses received from Judges Hillyer, Clarke, and Speer, and we would also speak in great praise of the kindness and urbanity of Solicitor-General Hill, and for his active efforts at the suppression of crime by the enforcement of law.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

The general presentments are published, as recommended, by Alex. M. Speer, the judge presiding.

MATTERS OF NOTE.

A TRIP TO THE NORTH POLE.

What Makes Trade Lively—In Death Not Divided—Birth of a Monstrosity—How She Missed the Boat—Some Expensive Sales—A Gypsy Tale.

New York Herald.

Professor Ritchell made a flying machine about two years ago that would really fly. It went up or came down at the wish of the operator, went forward and backward, turned around, remained in one place or went to any desired point—in short, it proved that a flying machine was possible, although it fell far short of realizing what its projectors hoped for, and that while navigation in the air was possible under certain conditions, there were circumstances when it was not practicable. The machine was exhibited in Philadelphia, at the permanent exhibition, at Hartford, and subsequently at Boston. Its performances excited wonder and surprise, and indicated the correctness of the principle upon which its construction was based, even if it did not go further. But even flying machines lose their novelty as a show-piece, and Professor Ritchell is now in the field with a new project, suggested, perhaps, by Commander Cheyne's grand scheme of reaching the north pole by aeronautic voyages. Professor Ritchell says: "I will go to the north pole with my airship, and the very reasons that will keep Captain Cheyne from reaching there will be the ones by which I will be able to succeed." In carrying out this idea he has built a working model of the airship he proposes to send to the Arctic regions. It does not differ materially from the one exhibited a few months ago. The lifting power is in a horizontally placed cylinder of gossamer cloth—fine linen coated with India rubber. It is charged with hydrogen gas, made by the usual process from iron turnings and sulphuric acid. Broad bands extend over the cylinder, which is about twenty-five feet long and thirteen feet in diameter, narrowing toward each end. The bands are fastened to a light, strong rod, from which the car is suspended. The machine is shaped something like the skeleton of a cutter sleigh, on top of which is the operator's seat.

In front of the seat is a cog-edged steel wheel about ten inches in diameter, with double handles, geared to a four-bladed fan, moving horizontally beneath the operator. It can be turned 2,500 times in a minute. The blades of the fan are of strong wood, and each has a superficial area of about fifty square inches. The blades are set like those of a propeller—that is, at a small angle with the screw which turns them. This constitutes part of the lifting and drawing down power. The gas raises ninety-nine pounds of every hundred to be lifted; the fan takes care of the other pound. The operator, wishing to descend, reverses the wheel. From the front of the frame reaches out two rods, carrying at their extremity a vertically working fan, revolving 2,800 times a minute. It is exactly like the propeller of a steamship, except that it can be turned by the operator's foot from right to left and vice versa, and thus it becomes a rudder as well. It will send the machine forward or take it backward, and also change its direction. The two fans can be worked together or separately, the machinery being simple and quite within the control of the operator. Such is the plan in the diminutive by which Professor Ritchell hopes to reach the north pole. The machine he now has will carry one man. It has been tried, and although much like the one exhibited before it has many improvements, is more easily controlled and perfectly balanced. Instead of worsted bands around the gas cylinder the professor proposes to have steel adjustable bands on the big ship, which will compress the gas in the bag or allow it to expand at will. This arrangement will, he says, counteract the influence of the cold weather in the high latitudes. He believes he can make headway against wind blowing at the rate of ten miles an hour. The machine has already traveled against a six-mile wind at a fair speed. Further details of his proposed pleasure trip to the pole the professor has not yet formulated.

WHAT MAKES TRADE LIVELY.

New York Graphic.

March 15.—I must buy to-day:
Some cologne.
Some hair-pins.
Some ruche lace.
Some satin gloss for shoes.

March 16.—Dear me! I'm always out of something. To-day I must—
Look for material for spring dress.
Pair of —.
Bottle of vaseline.
Tooth-powder.
Face-powder.
New tooth-brush.

In addition, I was tempted into buying two of those beautiful new bows and a new pen-knife.

March 17.—I've nearly decided on the material for one dress. It's more expensive than I expected, but I must have it. Bought to-day:
Four yards of new ribbon.

Pair house slippers.
Pair new corsets.
New celluloid comb for front hair.
Tortoise shell pin for back hair.
Two pair cuffs.
Three collars.
One paper dress pattern.
One paper pattern for jacket.
Leather belt and pocket.
Needles and thread.
Worsted for fancy work.
Two lace ties.

March 18.—I don't think I want anything to-day. I'm just going out, though, to look at the goods in the shop windows. Bought, unexpectedly, March 18:
Material for three spring dresses.
Lining for ditto.
Persian trimming for ditto.
Pair of rubber overshoes.
Pair of new scissors.
New feather for hat.
New hat.

WHY SHE MISSED THE VOTE.

She was to meet her adored one on the 9 o'clock Oakland boat, and it wanted fifteen minutes of the hour. Her hand was on the door to get out, when it struck her that she had forgotten to line her left eyebrow. Rushing to the glass to rectify this she discovered a small red spot, commemorative of a departed pimple. A dab of lilly white settled that defect, and she was about to make a fresh start, when a backward glance assured her that her new hat was not as becoming as it should be. So she stopped just long enough to give it a punch over one ear and a "hyke" in the back. Then her "Recamier locks" wanted a little arranging, and an inch of blonde must be pinned across her nose. Then she parted her lips to see if her filled tooth showed very plainly, and that started a most seductive dimple in one cheek which suggested a scrap of black court-plaster on its very verge to call attention to its dangers, like a signboard on a thinly frozen pond. Then she tipped the glass and stuck in the curling tongs to hold it, and walked across the room, with her head over her shoulder to get a back view, gave her drapery a twitch here and a pat there, tried to see how long a step she could take without bursting the tapers, gave herself a little shake like a sparrow after a shower, changed her four button gloves for six, sprinkled Lubin's latest on her handkerchief, stamped her little French heels once or twice to settle herself, and, seizing her parasol in the most approved style to show the lace to advantage, started for the ferry, where a smiling official, either in a fit of admiration or sarcasm, offered her his glass with which to watch the fast receding boat, already half across the bay.—San Francisco News Letter.

BIRTH OF A MONSTROSITY.

The birth of a human monstrosity has just been made public in Roxford, N. C. It is a white child with two well-developed heads, four hands, two trunks, with twenty-four ribs each, a spinal column with fifty vertebrae, a head at each end, there being two vertebrae between the floating ribs of each trunk, no legs or any signs of them. The excretory organs are situated longitudinally each side of the umbilicus, and each one is of the masculine gender. When it rises upon its hands and attempts to crawl, each head moves in an opposite direction. It is well and healthy, and is the [illegible] son of a young lady of respectability. The [illegible] that produced this peculiar being has not yet [illegible] to the [illegible], although few know of it. Immediately after its birth it was put in charge of a wet-nurse, who was placed in a cabin and enjoined to keep the secret, but she had a particular friend to whom she imparted the news, and that person gave a gentleman the clue to its whereabouts and the way to obtain a view of the living curiosity. Each body is independent of the other, so far as hunger, thirst, etc., are concerned, but one does not stay awake long after the other is asleep. This not only beats the Siamese twins, but the world, so far as we know.

IN DEATH NOT DIVIDED.

Okaloosa Herald.

A touching incident occurred in the deaths of the aged people, Mr. and Mrs. Dickson, last week. For convenience in attendance during their illness they were placed in separate bed-rooms. The heads of the beds were placed against a thin partition, which having an open door permitted the two old people to converse though not able to see each other. The night before the husband died his wife heard him groaning and was very anxious to be with him, but was unable to arise. Soon she was informed that he was dying, and in order to be near him, the beds were moved so as to bring them parallel with the partition, the heads opposite the door. This done, the fond wife reached out her hand, grasped her husband by the hand, and held it during his last moments. Thus death found them as nearly or quite fifty-one years before the marriage ceremony left them, joined hand in hand. It was a simple and affectionate token of the love of a long life, and the day following the wife, too, folded her arms in the sleep of death, and joined her husband in the beginning of a longer life.

A GYPSY TALE.

A few weeks ago a respectable old peasant farmer in Roumelia, smitten by the charms of a young gypsy girl belonging to a tribe that had squatted in the neighborhood of his farm, induced the maiden to listen to his addresses, and finally obtained her consent to become his wife. He received several warnings from sundry of her gypsy lovers, couched in threatening terms, but was so infatuated by her surprising beauty that he disregarded these monitions and married her. On his wedding night a number of stalwart gypsy youths broke into his house, seized him in his bridal bed, bound him to a plank, and deliberately sawed him in two, having previously strangled his young wife before his eyes. On the same night the tribe struck its tents and decamped, nor have the authorities as yet succeeded in laying hands upon the perpetrators of the crime.

COSTLY PAINTINGS.

The sum realized from the sale of the Demidoff paintings ($537,365) is very large, but it has been excelled at least once and approached several times. The Gillott collection of 525 pictures brought $806,050 in 1872; Mr. Albert Grant sold his 205 pictures for $520,684; in 1875, Mr. Mendel's Manley hall collection of 445 pictures sold for $499,800, and 20 years earlier, Lord Northwick's 1,881 pictures brought him $488,198 in cash. Without making the statement too positively, it is probable that the largest sum ever actually paid for any single canvas was $119,544, the picture being Murillo's "Conception of the Virgin," which was bought for the Louvre at Paris, at the sale of Marshal Soult's collection in 1852. And possibly 300,000 francs is the largest sum ever received for a single work by a living artist, the picture in this case being "1807," the painter Meissonier, and the buyer A. T. Stewart.

The Great Methodist Order.

The first Methodist society in America (of five members) was organized in October, 1766, by Philip Embury, a local preacher. The first general conference was held in Baltimore, 1792. At this early date in the history of the church, the book concern (previously opened at Philadelphia) was formally established by general conference action. To-day the book concern of the Methodist Episcopal church is the largest religious publishing house in the world. The statistics for the Methodist Episcopal church are as follows:

Number of annual conferences	96

John Ryan.

Last week was a memorable week in the dry goods trade of Atlanta. Never have we seen such an immense rush of customers as that which we witnessed a few days ago while standing on Whitehall street. The great center of attraction seemed to be the old house of John Ryan. Crowds were surging hither and thither, and nearly all bore evidences of having visited this popular place, for each had a package, and some very large bundles, all marked from John Ryan's. The very name of John Ryan has become the synonym of bargains, and it is no wonder. He richly deserves the immense patronage that he is receiving. Always buying goods at the closest possible figures, and when he runs upon a big bargain he does not mark it up to the regular old price, but puts it at a very small profit and sells it at once. This is the way to do business. Quick sales and small profits are his plans. For next week he has a lot of bargains that he will put forth, and we advise those wishing anything in the dry goods, carpet and shoe line to visit the house of John Ryan before purchasing as we are sure he can sell you a bargain. See his advertisement in another column.

The Cotton Week.

LIVERPOOL, April 9.—This week's circular of the Liverpool cotton brokers' association says: Cotton was active early in the week and prices advanced, but on Wednesday and Thursday business was very limited at easier rates and the market closed without material change from last week. American was in good demand, and good middling closed 1-16d higher than last Thursday. In sea island the business was small and quotations were unchanged. Futures opened steady and with a more active demand prices improved 5 32d to Monday afternoon. Since then they have been dull and the advance was lost. They closed steadier with a recovery of 1 32d for near positions. Later months are weak and freely offered.

Decline in Iron.

PITTSBURG, April 9.—The Western iron association held a meeting at noon to-day, which was largely attended. After discussing the situation, a resolution was unanimously adopted that the card rate should be reduced from $4 to $3.20, to take effect Monday the 12th inst.

Advance in Gas.

NEW YORK, April 9.—The gas companies of this city have made an agreement to advance the price of gas after the 15th of the present month. The new rates will be $2.25 to small consumers, and $2.00 and 1.75 to large consumers.

Grateful Women.

None receive so much benefit, and none are so profoundly grateful and show such an interest in recommending Hop Bitters as women. It is the only remedy peculiarly adapted to the many ills the sex is almost universally subject to. Chills and fever, indigestion or deranged liver, constant or periodical sick headaches, weakness in the back or kidneys, pain in the shoulders and different parts of the body, a feeling of lassitude and despondency, are all readily removed by these Bitters.—Courant.

Strasser's Crime.

Special dispatch to The Constitution.

PARIS, April 9.—Jules Strasser, cashier of the Rothschilds, at Vienna, who was recently arrested for embezzling half a million florins from his employers, lost money in speculations on the bourse. His brokers have also been arrested.

John Keely's Grand Opening.

Perhaps never in the mercantile history of Atlanta, has such a furore been created than that of last Monday and Tuesday at John Keely's spring opening. Such a stock of millinery, including hats and bonnets, feathers, flowers, rich ribbons and trimmings, etc., has never been exhibited in Atlanta.

His first day's sale of silk suits ready-made, reached in number, 21 suits, but this is not to be wondered at. A silk suit at $14.75 is something wonderful, especially when gotten up in such taste as those which Captain Keely is selling at that price.

His stocks of silk is enormous, whilst his fancy dress goods are peerless in their beauty as well as in variety. He has on hand now no less than four hundred pieces of bunting of every conceivable style and color, also, a choice line of cheaper fancy dress goods, embracing everything from 10 cent goods up to beautiful things at 25 cents per yard. Keely works for the millions! The customer of most refined taste, as well as those of most slender means, can here be accommodated, and suited in their tastes. His lace department is replete in novelties, and when it comes to shoes! well! who keeps such a stock as he! Such slippers are never seen, so varied in style, so lovely in effect. Certainly he has spared no trouble, nor evaded no opportunity to invest in "things lovely" in this stock. He has on hand at present something over twenty thousand dollars worth of shoes, and nobody need go away without having found just precisely what they want. Success seems to perch upon Keely's banners in business, and surely he deserves it—for he performs an immense amount of labor in order to be "up and dress't" in his business. Read his notices in another column and give him a call. You will be amply repaid.

Surprise Store.

Attention is called to the special sale of trimmed hats at Regenstein & Kutz's Surprise store, 74, 76 and 78 Whitehall street, 2,500 trimmed hats to be disposed of at marvellously low prices. A fine hat as low as 50 cents, or as high as $5.00. We were shown a fine cheap hat at $2.50 which we were assured sold at $5.00 only last Saturday. We never saw so many hats in one place in our life. It seems an impossibility that so large an establishment as Messrs. Regenstein & Kutz occupy could be devoted principally to the sale of millinery goods, and pay—but it does and enormously. 25 young men and attractive salesmen are busy the entire day attending to the wants of their customers. 18 additional ladies are constantly trimming hats and filling orders, and why is this? because the goods here can be obtained at about half the prices that milliners charge for the same goods. They are content with exceedingly small profits. The results of their good business judgment is that they are what they claim to be, the leading millinery establishment in the south.

The Army in Cuba.

Special dispatch to The Constitution.

MADRID, April 9.—Congress has approved the decree fixing the strength of the permanent army in Cuba at 40,000 men. Congress has also limited the floating debt of Cuba to 6,000,000 piasters, except in the event of an emergency.

The budget committee is to-day discussed the duties on the refined sugars and breadstuffs imported into Cuba.

A Postponed Execution.

YANKTON, April 9.—Acting Governor Hand has granted a reprieve in the case of L. Couk, of Deadwood, postponing the execution till July 23. Couk was convicted of murder and sentenced to be hanged April 16th.

A White Frost.

VICKSBURG, April 10.—There was a white frost here yesterday morning.

FOREIGN FLASHES.

THE duchess of Marlboro's relief fund now amounts to £101,891, of which £86,622 have been expended.

ANOTHER Paris dispatch says a dispatch to Premier DeFreycinet from the French consulate at Singapore reports that a Frenchman on a mission to Sumatra has been assassinated with his two companions.

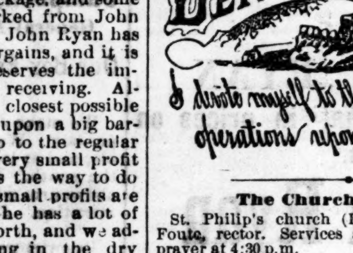

A DISPATCH from St. Petersburg to the Daily News says the departure of General Skobeloff for central Asia is still uncertain. The opinion is current in some circles that his movements will depend on the change in the English ministry.

AT the preliminary meeting of the representatives of the Irish associations in London, last night, a committee was formed to organize a public reception for Mr. Chas. S. Parnell on his arrival in London. All the Irish organizations of the metropolis will be invited to participate.

A PARIS dispatch says the bishop of Angers has induced his diocesan archbishop of Tours and suffragan bishops of the arch-dioceses to send a joint episcopal letter to President Grevy protesting against the decrees relative to unauthorized religious congregations.

THE Paris correspondent of the London Times says: "M. Krapotkine, brother of General Krapotkine, who was assassinated by the nihilists at Kieff, but who is himself editor of the nihilist organ, 'The Tocsin,' at Geneva, has been requested by the cantonal authorities to quit Geneva, and has accordingly moved to the village of Montreux, in the canton of Vaud.

THE details are now furnished of the arrest of the courier of Prince Lieven, one of the secretary's of the state, charged with forging passports. His wife is also seriously implicated in the revolutionary proceedings. Ninety-two thousand roubles, found in their possession, are said to be the proceeds of the sale of about fourteen thousand fraudulent passports fabricated by them during the past eight years.

THE COTTON MARKET.

CONSTITUTION OFFICE,
Atlanta, April 10, 1880.

New York—A very serious decline took place in the cotton market during the past week, and speculators have been thoroughly excited. Compared with the prices of a week ago the months have realized losses amounting to 85 to 95 points. The heavy fluctuations in the market for the past few days have stimulated the speculative feeling, which resulted in sales of 295,000 bales yesterday, these figures being about 10,000 bales in excess of any previous day's sales since the establishment of the cotton exchange. At the close to-day the undertone was steady with futures a few points under the opening prices, and the prevailing opinion is that the bottom has not yet been reached. The bears have certainly accomplished an important victory, the consequences of which is a matter of great loss to the country. What is to take place in the coming week remains to be seen, and every one must be governed by by his own feelings. Spots have tumbled down considerably. At the close to-day middlings are quoted at 12¼c, these figures being ⅝c under the prices of one week ago. Net receipts for the week ending last night amount to 37,997 bales, against 46,989 bales last week and against 46,301 bales for the corresponding week last year; exports for the week 65,773 bales; net receipts to-day 5,156 bales; exports 6,349 bales; stock 730,300 bales; sales today for future delivery 193,000 bales.

Liverpool—Futures closed steadier. Spots—Uplands 7 3 16d; Orleans 7¼d; sales 4,000 bales, of which 3,250 were American.

The local cotton future market has been in a state of unusual excitement for some days past and active speculations have resulted. The spot market, however, remains quiet and dull with buyers all holding off. Our receipts for the week ending last night amount to 162 bales, against 515 bales last week and against 1,418 bales for the corresponding week last year. The market has declined in the past few days that prices are not established. Cotton is nominal at the following quotations: Good middlings 11¾@12c; middlings 11¼@11½c; low middlings 11⅛@11¼c; good ordinary 10@10¼c.

During the past few days I received a great many very handsome and novel things in Dress Goods, Trimmings, Buttons, Hosiery, Gloves, etc. It is generally understood (and I endorse the same) that I carry the largest and best assorted stock of goods in my line to be found south. I also understand, that I am selling many lines of goods for less money than they can be purchased for elsewhere. This I will take for granted, but would not have you do so, until first you convince yourself by examining my goods and prices, and I know that you will will readily indorse my motto: "Big sales, small profits," as one that meets the wants of all classes and conditions of the people. For my short profit plan and one price system has placed me in the front ranks, and by dealing with all alike and selling to your child as yourself, I trust that I may in the future merit your highly esteemed patronage.
